COOLIDGE WILL URGE ECONOMY

Message Will Carry Important Recommendations.

MAY AVOID TAX QUESTION

President Expected to Advocate American Participation in World Court and Action by Congress on the Muscle Shoals Proposition. Also Will Ask Careful Consideration of the Airplane Question.

Washington, Nov. 15.—The approaching short session of congress can do little but enact appropriation bills for the coming fiscal year, congressional leaders say.

President Coolidge will make certain recommendations concerning other legislation, but these will be confined to matters pending about which there is no great divergence of opinion among the struggling factions of the dying congress. Proposals for new legislation he is expected to conserve until the new congress elected Nov. 4 assembles, either in special session next summer or in December, 1925.

Economy is expected to be the keynote of the president's message to congress in December. He probably will refrain from touching on the tax question, excepting to point out its intimate relationship with economy. This virtually was decided on at a conference he had with Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, who likewise announced he would make no tax recommendations in his annual report.

Other matters will be touched upon, however, including the world court, Muscle Shoals, the agricultural situation, foreign debt question, the tariff and army and navy.

Regarding the world court, the president is expected to recommend that America translate her ideals into practical results by providing for immediate adherence to The Hague court. As to Muscle Shoals, he will advise congress to make up its mind without delay, either to appoint a congressional commission to study the problem of its disposition or make up its mind what it is going to do with it.

The president will, it is said, warn against "tinkering" with the tariff, holding it one of the sources of prosperity. He will recommend keen consideration of the airplane question, and to urge quick action on the bill providing for needed repairs to battleships and certain new construction. In this connection Mr. Coolidge may make clear his position on the gun elevation question.

MANY CLAIMS HEARD

Activities of State Industrial Commission During October.

Columbus, Nov. 15.—More claims were heard during October by the industrial commission and forces of the workmen's compensation division of the department of industrial relations and fewer are pending action than in September, Herman Witter, director of public relations, announced. One death claim was completed and an award granted within six days after it was filed, evidencing the speed with which claims are now being rushed through the various channels to disposition.

There were 23,604 claims heard in October, as compared with 21,747 in the month previous, when 1,370 claims were pending action. These were reduced to 1,328 in October. Seventy-five workmen were killed in Ohio during October, showing an increase of 15 over the September toll, and non-fatal accidents increased also, 16,349 persons having been hurt last month, as compared with 15,044 in September.

SEEK MARKET HERE

German Steel Kings May Compete With American Corporations.

New York, Nov. 15.—Steel magnates of Germany hope to build here a great market for the iron and steel industry of the fatherland. This was revealed here upon the arrival in this country of Hans Thyssen and directors of the Thyssen iron and steel works of Nuelheim, Germany. Officials of the German company intend making a survey of the entire United States to determine the practicability of German competition with the United States Steel corporation and the Bethlehem Steel corporation. The principal question that the survey is expected to reveal, it was stated, is whether or not German steel products can be profitably marketed here in the face of the protection which the high tariff affords American manufacturers.

MILITARY BOARD PRESENTS REPORT

Grand Jury to Probe the Recent Rioting at Niles.

Columbus, Nov. 15.—Governor Donahy announced that the Trumbull county grand jury will investigate the rioting at Niles between klan and anti-klan factions that occurred Nov. 1.

This announcement was made after a conference the governor had with Attorney General Crabbe, Adjutant General Henderson and the military board that investigated the rioting. Whether H. A. Burgess, Trumbull county prosecutor, or the attorney general will conduct the investigation will be decided at a further conference Monday, to which Burgess was summoned by the governor.

The report of the military board recommended that Burgess call a special grand jury to investigate the riots, and that the governor instruct the attorney general to assign special counsel to assist Burgess.

The second recommendation, according to Attorney General Crabbe's advice to the governor, can not be complied with. "Under the law, the attorney general can not go before a grand jury conducted by the prosecutor," said Crabbe. "It would invalidate the entire proceedings."

Under this interpretation, it will be necessary either for the investigation to be conducted entirely by Burgess, with outside assistance from the state's legal department, or for the attorney general to direct the entire probe.

The governor did not make public the evidence gathered by the military investigating board, for the reason that a great part of this in all probability will be submitted to the grand jury.

Jardine Named.

Washington, Nov. 15.—William J. Jardine, president of Kansas agriculture college, was appointed by President Coolidge as an additional member of the president's agricultural commission. This makes the total membership of the commission nine.

FOUGHT FLAMES FOR SIX HOURS

Firemen Subdue Fire on Jersey City Water Front.

PROPERTY LOSS $1,000,000

Huge Saltpeter Plant, Large Warehouse and Dozen Tenements Devoured by the Flames—Dynamite and Fireboats Used to Stay the Conflagration—Several Firemen Receive Injuries.

Jersey City, N. J., Nov. 15.—Fought for six hours by hundreds of firemen and streams from fireboats, fire ravaged several blocks along the Jersey City water front. The property loss is estimated at $1,000,000.

The flames devoured the saltpeter plant of Batelle & Renwick, the large warehouse of the American Sugar Refining company and a dozen tenement dwellings and spread steadily, whipped by a high wind.

A terrific explosion, followed by five others in rapid succession, blew the ruins of the factory high in the air. Three adjoining dwellings tumbled to the ground. Firemen were showered with falling debris.

Bricks, machinery and timbers flew through the air, while clouds of gaseous acid spread through the devastated area. Several firemen were injured and even some spectators behind the fire lines sustained minor hurts.

Scenes of heroism played their part as the Jersey City firemen, nearly exhausted after hours of endeavor, still kept their slowly yielding lines drawn as tightly as possible around the burning area. Step by step they were forced back by the terrific heat and advancing walls of flame as the fire approached the huge warehouse of Colgate & Company, where 6,000 tons of soap were stored.

Cheers went up from the crowd behind the ropes as Captain George Bush went up a fire escape, smashed a tenement house window and brought down a small boy.

The fight from the river was intensified. Jersey City and Lehigh Valley railroad tugs joining the fireboats. Dynamite also was used to stay the flames. Thousands of New Yorkers across the river watched the progress of the fire from office buildings.

Meanwhile children were being removed from schools and institutions in the vicinity.

Five hundred families were made temporarily homeless by the blaze and cots were set up for refugees in the Fourth regiment armory.

Police lines were thrown about a district of six square blocks surrounding the fire. For the first hour of the fire something of a panic reigned as families in the stricken area, ordered to abandon their homes, ran about in wild confusion, seeking to save some of their belongings.

A dozen firemen and 20 men, women and children in neighboring houses, cut by flying glass or overcome by the chemical fumes, were rushed to hospitals or to emergency first aid stations set up in neighboring drug stores. Red Cross nurses and volunteer physicians hastily appeared on the scene with first aid kits.

SEEKS APPROPRIATION

Health Director Monger Advocates Tuberculosis Clinics.

Columbus, Nov. 15.—Health Director Monger announced at the conference of Ohio health commissioners that he will ask the next legislature for an appropriation, "not to exceed $30,000," to conduct monthly tuberculosis clinics in every county in the state where an adequate system is not already provided. The move is inspired by disclosure, made through diagnostic chest clinics, conducted by volunteers, that 28 per cent of persons previously exposed to tuberculosis were either in the incipient or moderately advanced stage of the disease and that "none of them was under medical treatment."

With the fact established that a patient with incipient tuberculosis has an 85 per cent chance of recovery against only 40 to 45 per cent for a patient with an advanced case, and with knowledge that approximately 10 cases exist for every death, which means a total of more than 50,000 in Ohio, it can be seen how important early discovery becomes, Director Monger said.

Carpenter Killed by Fall.

Columbus, Nov. 15.—C. L. Jordan, carpenter, was killed when he fell from the roof of a house on which he was working. His neck was broken.

REV. JOE LONGRAN

SUIT DISMISSED BY HIGH COURT

Taxpayer Sought to Prevent Sinking of Warship.

NO JURISDICTION, COURT SAYS

Controversy Likely to Be Transferred to Congress Next Month, and a Complete Investigation of the Actual Condition of the Navy May Be Ordered—Secretary Wilbur's Answer to the Suit.

Washington, Nov. 15.—The taxpayer's suit brought by William Shearer, naval expert of New York, to restrain Secretary of the Navy Wilbur from sinking the United States battleship Washington under the terms of the arms treaty was dismissed in the District of Columbia supreme court here. Shearer had no legal right as a taxpayer to bring the suit and the court had no jurisdiction to prevent a cabinet official from using his discretion under the law, Justice Hitz ruled. The decision will enable the navy department to continue with its plan to sink the Washington off the Virginia Capes next week by bombs and gun fire.

It seems certain that the controversy will be transferred to congress next month and that a complete investigation of the actual condition of the navy and its strength in comparison with those of Great Britain and Japan will be held. Senator King (Dem., Utah) heads a strong navy faction in the upper house and has introduced a resolution providing such an inquiry, while Representative Fred Britten (Rep., Ill.) is sponsor of a similar inquiry in the house.

Secretary Wilbur in his answer to the suit held that the naval limitations treaty specifically provides for scrapping of the capital ship, and that congress empowered the president to authorize the method by which its destruction is to be accomplished. Wilbur did not touch in his answer on Shearer's charges that the British government had not fulfilled its part of the treaty, as regards scrapping of ships, nor on Shearer's statement that destruction of the vessel was a sacrifice of taxpayers' money. Shearer also stated that all the nations participating had not ratified all conference treaties, and that the Washington could not be scrapped until this had been done. Wilbur merely stated that the treaty provides specifically for the scrapping of the Washington. The secretary denied that the Washington cost $30,000,000, as Shearer stated in his suit, giving the figure as $16,600,000, which was reduced to $15,240,000, he said, by sale of surplus material and other income. He also denied that the vessel was 85 per cent completed, as Shearer alleged, but said it was only 75.9 per cent finished, when work was stopped in August, 1922.

CHILD LABOR PROPOSAL

Will Be Up For Ratification in 35 States This Winter.

Washington, Nov. 15.—Legislatures of 35 states will have up for ratification the coming winter the child labor amendment to the United States constitution.

When congress gave the amendment the necessary two-thirds vote last summer to put it before the states, it was not anticipated that the amendment would face a hard fight thereafter, but the situation has changed. The forces opposed to the amendment have organized on a national scale and are now prepared to resist ratification in every state.

Three states have rejected the amendment already, through their legislatures: Louisiana, Georgia and North Carolina. In addition Massachusetts, by popular referendum taken on the same day as the presidential election, declared against it.

Kills Four and Self.

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 15.—Five persons are dead here, the victims of a jealous husband's rage. Henry Weber, 28, a barber, shot and killed his wife, from whom he had been estranged; Earl Shader, Mrs. Shader and Mrs. Thomas Alexander before committing suicide. The shooting occurred at Weber's home. A fourth woman escaped by hiding in an ice box.

Workers Demand Strong Navy.

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 15.—Representatives of 550,000 unionized metal workers in convention here adopted a resolution calling upon President Coolidge and congress to immediately make adequate provision for the strengthening and maintenance of a well balanced navy based upon the 5-5-3 ratio provided by the Washington arms treaty.

FACES $70,000 DEFICIT

Republican State Campaign Committee Files Expense Account.

Columbus, Nov. 15.—The expense account filed by the Republican state campaign committee shows a deficit of $69,695.79, after spending $147,698.28 on behalf of its candidates in the last election. The Republican state central committee received the report of the campaign committee and discussed ways and means of meeting the deficit. It is understood that the central committee, while assuming the deficit, feels members of the campaign committee should help in reducing it.

The Democratic state campaign committee spent only $31,725.27 and is left with a surplus from its $33,863 receipts of $2,137.73, which will be used to maintain its "headquarters," according to its statement, which says Governor Donahy's appeal for campaign contributions was given a great response, $36,500 coming in from 1,150 givers. Contributions coming from persons who were interested in getting relatives pardoned, job seekers, and certain contractors and building material concerns were refused by the governor and returned to the donors, the governor said.

Cincinnati, Nov. 15.—Cincinnati city council, at a special meeting, passed an ordinance continuing until April 1 the present gas rate, which expires on Dec. 15. Mayor John Carrel signed the ordinance immediately. The employment of an expert to make a valuation of the Union Gas and Electric company, on which to base new rates was deferred until a later date.

EXPENSE ACCOUNTS FILED

Davis Spent $2,000 in His Campaign For Governorship.

Columbus, Nov. 15.—Harry L. Davis, late Republican candidate for governor, spent $2,000 in his unsuccessful campaign, according to his personal expense statement, filed with the secretary of state. Traveling and hotel bills cost him $1,000 and the other $1,000 was a contribution to his state campaign committee, according to Davis' report.

Steubenville Automobile club reported spending $556 in support of Davis' candidacy.

Thomas H. Morrow committee, Cincinnati, reported contributions of $1,440 and expenditures of the same amount, in behalf of Morrow's candidacy for attorney general.

W. T. Kinder of Cleveland, treasurer of the W. H. Kinder committee, reported expenditures totaling $1,347 in behalf of Kinder's candidacy for supreme court judge.

Election Contest Looms.

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 15.—With the official canvass of the senatorial vote completed in all but two Iowa counties and Senator Smith W. Brookhart leading Dan F. Steck, his Democratic opponent, by only 755 votes out of a total of more than 894,000, a contest for the seat of the junior Iowa senator seems a certainty. Definite announcement of his intention to contest the election was withheld by the Democratic candidate.

Much Profit in Well-Bred Bull

Animal Should Be Given Care and Management to Insure Good Condition.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the most important aims of the dairyman should be to have the services of a good, well-bred bull, says the United States Department of Agriculture, and then, having a good bull, he should be given the care and management that will insure the greatest profit from him. He should be so fed and exercised as to maintain his activity and healthy, vigorous condition.

Grain to Feed.

The amount of grain to feed to dairy sires varies from four to ten pounds, depending on the size and condition of the animal and the kind of roughage. A grain mixture recommended by the department as having been used with success consists of three parts ground corn (by weight), two parts ground oats, two parts wheat bran, and one part linseed meal. Another mixture suggested consists of three parts ground oats, two parts wheat bran, one part ground corn or barley, and one part linseed meal.

Ground oats are considered especially valuable for bulls. Cottonseed meal is not usually regarded with favor, especially when fed in large amounts. Some breeders think it causes impotency.

On some farms the bulls are given the spoiled or musty hay or waste feed left by other animals. This is poor practice. It is just as necessary to feed the bulls properly as the cows. The legume hays—alfalfa, clover, vetch, soy bean, cowpeas are excellent roughage, and should be fed liberally if possible. If the non-leguminous roughages, such as timothy or prairie hay, corn silage, stover, or fodder are fed, a grain mixture higher in protein should be used.

Use of Silage.

Breeders differ as to the advisability of feeding silage. Some maintain that a considerable amount of silage is likely to lessen the vigor of a bull and make him sterile. Others feed silage in large quantities and report no undesirable results. So far as experimental work shows, it is probable that silage does not have any direct effect on the breeding powers. Large amounts of silage, or other extremely bulky feeds, may have a tendency to distend the paunch so that the bull becomes too heavy on his feet. From 10 to 15 pounds of silage a day with other roughages can be fed safely without impairing the usefulness of the animal.

Dairy bulls should have plenty of water. This matter is often neglected, especially when there is not a constant supply in the stall or pen and when the bull is difficult to handle. A bull should be watered at least once a day during the winter and twice a day during the summer.

Millet Seed Is Rather Effective in Fattening

The several varieties of millet differ in the composition of their seeds, although the range is not great. Millet seeds, depending upon variety, contain 8 to 10 per cent water, 3 to 5 per cent ash, 10 to 12 per cent protein, 2 to 16 per cent fiber, 52 to 69 per cent nitrogen-free extract and 3 to 7 per cent fat. The seed of barnyard millet is twice as high in fiber as other varieties and is correspondingly low in nitrogen-free extract. Seed of the pearl millet has considerably more fat than other varieties.

Millet seed should always be ground for live stock feed. When ground and fed with a good roughage in the manner of other grain, millet seed is a rather effective fattening feed. At the South Dakota station millet seed proved practically equal to corn for lambs and about three-fourths as effective as corn in feeding to steers and swine.

Wheat Dockage Is Heavy, Say Government Experts

When the grain comes through the threshing it should be looked over and if at all dirty or contains much "foreign matter," such as weed seed, other grains, etc., with but few exceptions it will pay to clean wheat on the farm. The United States Department of Agriculture tells us that they estimate farmers of four spring wheat states shipped 11,000,000 bushels of dockage with their wheat last year. This could have been saved and the price paid for a higher grade if the grain had been cleaned at the threshing with a portable disk cleaner. The dockage can be used for feed, or ground and used for poultry at a considerable saving.

Control Grub Worms in Corn Ground by Plowing

Grub worms are controlled by fall plowing and rotation of crops. Grass crops are most susceptible to them and land that is in grasses is most liable to become infested with the worms. Therefore, when such a field is badly infested it should be followed by some crop that is not seriously injured by the grubs. They are not particularly injurious to wheat. If the soil is plowed soon and sowed to wheat the injury from grubs next spring will not be very extensive.

Riches Have Wings

I can remember when I was more enriched by a few cheap rays of light falling on the pond-side than by this broad sunny day. Riches have wings, indeed. The weight of present woes will express the sweetness of past experience. When sorrow comes, how easy it is to remember pleasure! When, in winter, the bees cannot make new honey, they consume the old.—Thoreau.

Richest in Animal Life

Back from the Nazari river, South America, a party of explorers led by Dr. William Beebe reports that in a single quarter of a square mile of tropical jungle—believed to be the richest in animal life in the world—it discovered 777 different sorts of vertebrates. Of these, 450 species were birds—a greater variety than occurs in the whole continent of North America.—Collier's Magazine.

Mirthless Laughter

All hyenas do not laugh, and those that do—the spotted hyenas—are not inspired by merriment. Their "laughter"—it is a horrid sound—generally indicates annoyance. In fact, so-called laughter in the animal kingdom is the reverse of happy, for the jackal gives a weird laugh when it is being pursued by its enemies.

Food Properties

Mothers of growing children in preparing their foods should consider well properties foods contain. Lime for bonemaking is obtained from milk and carrots, iron for blood from spinach, egg yolk and liver and lean meat, cabbage, raisins and tomatoes; the phosphorus from fish, beans, peas and whole grains.

Seemed Fitted to Survive

Some of the edentates of former times were creatures of immense size, such as the extinct glyptodon, whose great convex shell was remarkable for its strength. Why such a form as the glyptodon should have failed to keep his ground, says one authority, is a great mystery.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Whale's Small Throat

The blue whale sometimes reaches a length of 80 or 85 feet, says Nature Magazine. The opened mouth of one of these monsters is so large that 10 or 12 men can stand upright in its depths, yet the throat measures only about eight inches in diameter.

World's Continents

Geographers usually recognize five continents: North America, South America, Eurasia, including Europe and Asia, Africa and Australia. A sixth continent is sometimes represented by the land area about the Antarctic region.

North American Species

Researches of the last 30 years or so have confirmed the opinion that the animals called edentates, which include sloths, anteaters, armadillos, etc., originated in North America and afterward migrated to other parts of the world.

In Rebellious Moments

We have our rebellious moments under all this weight of regulation when we feel like running this slogan up to the masthead: We will neither eat nor do anything that is represented as being good for us.—Ohio State Journal.

Famous Trotting Horse

Goldsmith Maid, the famous bay trotting mare, held the one mile trotting record from 1871 to 1874, taking it from Dexter in 2:17 and losing it to Rarus in 2:13 1/4. She lowered the record to 2:14 before losing it.

Infant Prodigy

Alexis Claude Clairaut, the celebrated French mathematician, at the age of six years understood infinitesimals, and at twelve read before the learned Academy of Science of Paris an original paper on curves.

Early Mystery Story

"The Castle of Otranto," a novel by Horace Walpole, later fourth earl of Oxford, was the forerunner of the modern mystery story, and its publication in 1764 started a vogue of such stories in England.

Prayer of Br'er Williams

Lord, show us de right road, an' ef we don't travel it, please tell Satan to lay low an' not hit us too hard till he gits us for good an' all!—Atlanta Constitution.

A Child's Description

A child's description of her first concert: There was a lady screaming and a waiter played on the piano all the time.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Not So Serious for Him

Man may be inferior, but he doesn't waste nervous energy worrying for fear he will freckle.—Duluth Herald.

Where Rain Is Unknown

Rain has never been known to fall in that part of Egypt between the two lower falls of the Nile.

Not Always

Everything comes to those who wait except the time they lose.—Good Hardware.

Plea for Contentment

Since we have a good loaf, let us not look for cheesecakes.—Cervantes.

The Letter Was Not Sent

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(Copyright.)

EVELYN WOOD glanced up from her desk as Mr. Brayton passed through the room to his private office. He gave her the customary pleasant greeting with just a little longer look from his dark eyes that always disturbed her. It was rather a hardship for her when the firm of lawyers, Pettit & Pettit, for whom she had worked three years, took another man into the firm—a junior partner, and none other than Jim Brayton who wanted to marry her. As Evelyn had refused to marry him, and was now engaged to Arthur Lane, a young doctor, it was exceedingly awkward to be obliged to work for James.

This morning Brayton had scarcely reached his room before the buzzer sounded. Before she could gather book and pencils, it sounded again, louder, insistent.

"Ah, I have a very important letter to dictate, Miss Wood. Take it please—it must go out at once. Messrs. Smith & Fray, 2000 Walnut street, Philadelphia, Gentlemen:—I have your inquiry concerning the financial standing of Doctor Arthur Lane, and it is with great regret that I must advise you not to extend any credit to this person. He is deeply in debt, not only to this firm for legal services, but we understand that his credit here is so strained that it has prompted him to seek credit outside of his home city where his difficulties are well known. I also understand that he has been recently married, and that he has made promises to pay that have not, and probably will not, be fulfilled. Regretting the necessity for giving out this information, which you understand is entirely confidential, I am, etc., etc." Miss Wood, please let me have that letter at once, with the envelope. I will mail it myself. That is all—thank you."

Evelyn returned to her desk, uncovered her typewriter and rapidly transcribed the notes she had taken. When she had finished she put the carbon copies she had made in her desk. One copy was for herself. She carried the letter in to Brayton.

He signed it with a little flourish, read it over carefully, then he held out his hand for the envelope.

"I will mail it myself, Miss Wood." "Do you really intend to send that libelous letter?" asked Evelyn.

Brayton lifted his dark brows. "That is not just the attitude we have learned to expect from such a faithful worker as yourself, Evelyn," he said, reproachfully.

"Miss Wood—to you, if you please, Mr. Brayton." "Excuse me, Miss Wood! Of course I will send the letter—now, and as for Doctor Lane's recent marriage, one can hardly call that libelous, you know! Your ignorance concerning it does not necessarily imply that it did not take place."

"If Doctor Lane knew of this you would suffer," she said passionately. "It is libelous because Arthur does not owe one penny in this town, and you know it. When he sees your letter—" She stopped suddenly and paled.

Brayton smiled. "How can he see the letter, Miss Wood? Why should he hear about it? Are you not conscientious enough to keep within your own confidence the matters that go through this office? Doesn't the firm have your loyalty?"

Then a new voice broke into the conversation. Mr. Brown-Pettit stood in the doorway, displeasure written large on his benign countenance.

"Excuse me for intruding, Brayton, but may I see the letter in question?" Brayton winced, hesitated and in sudden anger tore the letter into bits which he tossed into the wastepaper basket. Then he walked to the window and stared out with jealous, miserable eyes. He knew that his connection with the firm would soon end.

"Have you a carbon copy of the letter, Miss Wood?" Mr. Brown-Pettit was asking. He followed Evelyn to her desk and she produced it.

"I understand that you are engaged to the doctor," he remarked mildly; "don't let this venomous letter annoy you or stir your faith in him. He came to see my wife last night—she is ill, you know, and he was telling about your engagement, and that you expected to be married in the fall. I will see you through, my dear Miss Wood, and I am afraid that Brayton will have to sever his connection with us."

Evelyn smiled through her tears. "Please don't do that, Mr. Brown-Pettit. I am sure it was just jealousy that prompted the whole thing and as soon as I leave it will be all right—I know James Brayton has the making of a brilliant lawyer—and I am so happy that I don't want anyone else to be unhappy!"

And James Brayton's wedding present to them was a mute testimony to the appreciation felt for Evelyn's generosity toward a jealous man.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

THOMAS W. MILLER HONORED BY FIDAC

Thomas W. Miller, alien property custodian, was elected president of the Fidac (Federation Inter-Alles des Anciens Combattants) at the London congress of that international body of veterans of the World war recently. Mr. Miller has announced that he will resign as alien property custodian, a position which he has held for a number of years.

With the honor to Mr. Miller there came another honor to America and to the American Legion at the congress. This was in the election of Roy Hoffman of Oklahoma as vice president of the organization.

In the Fidac all American veterans of the great conflict are represented by the American Legion. Fidac is composed of 10,000,000 veterans of the principal allied and associated countries. Its annual congress was held at New Orleans in 1922 at the time of the American Legion convention there.

The presidency of Fidac has from its organization until now rested with the French veterans. Charles Bertrand, a member of the French chamber of deputies, has held the position.

Mr. Miller was a colonel in the Seventy-ninth division in the World war. He was one of the members of the Paris caucus at which the first active steps looking towards the formation of the American Legion were taken.

The new president, it is understood, will devote his entire time to the activities of the Fidac. One of the questions, it is said, which confronts him is that of giving more concrete expression to the aspirations of the millions of veterans in Fidac.

Thought U. S. Flag Was Solid Crimson Block

Congressman A. Platt Andrew, wearing a Legion button, recently addressed the sixth annual convention of the American Legion at Pittsfield, Mass., and in the course of his remarks told the following yarn:

"When the Harvard medical unit was in a little village in France in the early days of the war, the natives developed the idea that the United States flag was a solid block of crimson. In consequence whenever it became known that the Yanks were about to leave in sight, red blankets were draped from windows, red mufflers were unwound from children's necks and red flags were flown wherever possible. The peasant women unlatched their red petticoats, came to the doors of their cottages and danced on the steps while they waved these underthings and joyously screamed, 'To 'ell wiz Yale, to 'ell wiz Yale,' as the lads marched by. This caused Ralph Robert of Cambridge, cheer leader, to call for three and a tiger for the Gloucester buddy."

Post in Massachusetts Builds Own Clubhouse

Methuen post of the American Legion at Lawrence, Mass., recently closed a deal whereby their post exchequer was enriched to the extent of several thousand dollars. Nor have they embraced the great profession born of the Eighteenth amendment. They merely contracted with themselves to build by themselves their clubhouse for themselves, and hence they now have a clubhouse which big-hearted contractors would have been glad to put up for them at some five thousand dollars more than it cost them by doing their own labor.

Invests in Lung Motor

The Portsmouth (Va.) post of the Legion recently promoted a fund to purchase a lung motor to be used in reviving persons taken out of water, gas victims and others whose lives might be saved by forced inhalations of oxygen.

PINCH AUCTIONEER TO BID AT SALE

New York Bowery Has an Unusual Sale.

New York.—A silent auction, where the bidders pinch the auctioneer and where transactions run to as high as $250,000 a day is one of the most unique markets on the Bowery.

It is here that three-fourths of the unredeemed pledges of pawnbrokers in the large Eastern cities are disposed of. Nothing is dealt in but jewelry, watches, antiques and such valuable articles as high-class field glasses.

Several buildings on the west side of the Bowery, between Hester and Canal streets, house the auction rooms and exchanges. The membership is exclusive. The personnel seldom varies, except as sons or nephews of the traders succeed to the business as the older men retire or die. Nearly all are wealthy.

Sales Are Held Daily.

Pawnbrokers bring their unredeemed pledges to the auction rooms where sales are held daily. A pawnbroker hands in for sale, for instance, a diamond ring and tells how much he wants for it—confidentially to the auctioneer. The auctioneer passes the ring from hand to hand in a circle of speculators about him. He is seated in a chair on an elevation. When the article is returned, he asks for a bid.

The bidders express their ambitions by pinching the anatomy of the auctioneer at various points from his ankle to his neck. When the bidding opens he is literally covered with hands. Each hand has its allotted place. The auctioneer knows, for example, that the hand on his right knee is that of Morris Hirsch, the hand on the left knee is that of Jacob Rabinowitz, the hand grasping his left elbow is that of Hyman Cohan, and so on. He feels a certain squeeze repeated in a certain way. That means Morris Hirsch has offered $200.

Pay After Auction.

That may be the only squeeze the auctioneer gets on the article on display; or he may get a dozen others. He hands the article to the man whose last squeeze indicated the highest bid. A memorandum is made and another article offered. No cash is exchanged and settlements are made at the end of the auction.

Sales are made with bewildering speed. When the stock is disposed of, the buyers troop downstairs to the ground floor exchange rooms and get ready for business.

The dealers have little stalls in the main exchange where jewelry purchasers visit them. Little time is wasted in bargaining and business is usually brisk.

Look Through Walls and Floors With New X-Ray

Schenectady.—X-ray machines by means of which one may look through solid walls and floors as easily as a surgeon or dentist now examines subcutaneous parts of his patient's body have been perfected. The inventors are Dr. W. D. Coolidge and his associates in the research laboratory of the General Electric company here.

The new apparatus, confined in a box 7 by 8 by 10 inches and weighing only 30 pounds, is expected to prove of great value, especially to plumbers, building contractors, electricians and jewelers. To use the device it will only be necessary to connect an ordinary extension cord to the nearest lamp socket or base plug of the household lighting system.

Hereafter, the inventors say, the man who wishes to hang a picture on the wall and doesn't know where to find a solid place to drive a nail will not have to ruin the wall before finding the right spot. The new machine may also prove a nemesis to smugglers. By shooting the rays through precious stones the jewelers would easily be able to determine the genuineness of any jewel.

Has Many Motors

Des Moines, Iowa.—Iowa has added to its "corn and hog" fame, but rather in reverse English, with the announcement of the state automobile department that on an average 97 counties have more automobiles than families. The department based the statement on a communication from a magazine's survey of the state.

Propose to Study Writings on Rocks

Virginia City, Nev.—Weird rock writings in caves ten miles northeast of here are to be studied with a view to determining whether they are the work of Indians, as heretofore supposed, or of ancient Chinese.

Gee Ding, Chinese student at the University of Nevada, made a visit to the caves recently and expressed belief that the writings are Chinese and depict a story of ancient Buddhist priests, an attempt to circumnavigate the globe and of the landing on this continent.

It is legend in China, according to Gee Ding, that long ago, perhaps thousands of years back, five ships under command of Buddhist priests set sail and never returned. Gee Ding believes it may be possible the writings were made by these people.

Music Played or Heard.

See the effects of a long piece of music at a public concert. The orchestra is breathless with attention, jumping to major and minor keys, executing fugues, and adding with the most ecstatic precision. In the midst of all this wonderful science, the audience is gaping, lolling, talking, staring about, and half devoured with ennui. On a sudden there springs up a lively little air, expressive of some natural feeling, though in point of science not worth a half-penny; the audience all spring up, every head nods, every foot beats time, and every heart also; an universal smile breaks out on every face; the carriage is not ordered; and everyone agrees that music is the most delightful rational entertainment that the human mind can possibly enjoy.—Sydney Smith.

CHARLES SHISLER

Committed Suicide at Home of Mother-in-Law Near Apple Postoffice.

Charles Shisler, farmer, living near Circleville, Pickaway county, committed suicide at the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Bryan Graham, living in the neighborhood of Apple Postoffice, Hocking county.

Mr. Shisler in company with his wife had gone to the Graham home for a visit, as Mr. Shisler had been in ill health for some time, and had arranged this visit in order to benefit his health. On Tuesday while the family were seated on the porch at the home Shisler arose from his chair walked into the front yard and fired three shots from a 32 calibre revolver into his body, the third piercing his heart.

Dr. Barton of Adelphi and S. M. Robinson of Laurelville, acting coronor, were notified and on arriving at the Graham home, found that Shisler's body had been allowed to lay on the ground from 2 o'clock in the afternoon until 8 o'clock in the evening. The body was taken to the family home by funeral director, Defenbaugh. Burial on Thursday afternoon—Adelphi Border News.

The suicide lived in this county, just west of the river. He was one of the devisees under the will of William Foresman and was given a few acres of ground near the old mill race.

Excellence in Poetry.

Supreme excellence in poetry is never attained by a sudden leap up from the common level of ideas and common speech, whether a man's everyday neighbors are rustics, or men and women of art and fashion and culture. The world in which his imagination moves is never entirely of his own creation. The great poet must have had pioneers from whom he derived some of the ideas and resources of his craft—enough, at least, to feed and stimulate and direct his inborn energy.—William Minto.

BANK OF ENGLAND IS TO BE REBUILT

Temporary Quarters Secured in Another Building.

London.—After functioning in the heart of London's "richest square" for 230 years, the Bank of England will cease to exist as the "Old Lady of Threadneedle Street" on its present site at the end of this year.

While not exactly undergoing a rejuvenating process, this national financial institution will be entirely rebuilt to meet modern needs.

In the meantime the huge financial operations connected with the nation's discounting of bills, financing the government and dealing with millions of interest payments on war loans and treasury bills will be handled in a comparatively new block of buildings about a quarter of a mile away in Finsburg Circus. Here will be the home of the "old lady" for about two years.

Strong rooms are being constructed in the new premises for the valuable private and government securities, which total around £125,000,000 sterling, and for the reception of £125,000,000 worth of gold bars and coin held as reserve against notes issued. Some of these valuable securities already have been deposited in the new vaults, but the bullion goes later in horse-drawn lorries.

During the moving process no strangers are allowed to assist in handling the hundreds of tons of treasures, the whole work being carried out by the bank's special staff.

Interest in Life Her Secret of Keeping Young

Mrs. Lois Dyer of Ashfield, Mass., who at the age of seventy-six is handling several hundred telephone calls every day. She is the oldest telephone operator in New England and her philosophy is worth a lot: "If you want to keep young have an interest in life."

Pharaoh of the Exodus Had Hardened Arteries

New York.—Examination of Egyptian mummies has revealed that the pharaoh of the exodus had hardened arteries, while Rameses V suffered from a skin affliction suggestive of smallpox. Prof. G. Elliott Smith, Egyptologist of University college, London, said recently in an address at the Academy of Medicine. Cancer, rheumatism and mastoiditis were common 4,000 years ago, Professor Smith declared, and although thousands of human bodies have been unearthed only one case of gout and one of leprosy were discovered. Tuberculosis was extremely rare, while rickets, he said, was entirely absent. One mummy found in the pyramids had suffered from cancer.

Skeleton 1,000 Years Old

Montreal.—While digging the foundation of a new warehouse in Outremont, a suburb, a laborer discovered the skeleton of an Indian, which scientists believed to be more than a thousand years old.

The body was in a sitting position, head between the knees, according to the funeral rites of the ancient Algonquins.

Persons Causing Fires

Criminals, Says Chief

Worcester, Mass.—Persons responsible for fire through carelessness are criminals and should so be treated, said Fire Chief McCarthy at a hearing before the state fire commission here. The committee, appointed by Governor Cox, is seeking means to reduce fire losses in this state.

"I urge the passage of laws making every person on whose premises fire occur answer before a court and there give reason for such fire," the chief said. "If he is unable to prove that the fire was not due to his carelessness or negligence he should be fined to make him realize his guilt."

NATIVE OF CIRCLEVILLE

Judge Fletcher Morris Doan Died Suddenly at Home in Arizona.

Was Known as "The Grand Old Man of Douglas" and Commanded Respect of All Who Knew Him—Graduated From Everts Sixty Years Ago.

Judge Fletcher Morris Doan, a native of this city died suddenly, October 28, at his home in Douglas, Arizona, of heart trouble.

Judge Doan was a graduate of Everts high school in the class of March 25, 1864, sixty years ago. Of the class of seven young women and two young men three are living. They are Mrs. Melissa A. Latta, of South Court street and Mrs. C. W. Myers of North Scioto street and Mrs. Mary W. Emmitt, of Howe, Indiana. Henry A. Jackson, father of Dr. H. D. Jackson was a member of this class.

The Douglas Daily Dispatch of October 29, says:

"Judge Fletcher Morris Doan, eminent jurist, financier, builder, church worker, public benefactor, 'the Grand Old Man of Douglas' died at his residence at 1148 Ninth street, shortly before 10 o'clock yesterday morning. Death was due to heart trouble and came as a shock to the entire community and to thousands of friends throughout the state.

While in failing health for many months past, Judge Doan, erect in carriage, gracious in manner, ever courteous and kindly, had attended to the duties of his law business at his offices in the First National bank building and was at those offices on Monday until after five o'clock in the afternoon. During Monday night he became slightly ill but arose in the morning intent upon the problems of the day only to fall unconscious just as he was leaving for his offices. He never recovered consciousness and died within a few hours. Judge Doan was 78 years of age and his mind, one of the brightest and cleanest in the state was clear until the last few hours.

Probably the passing of no man living in this part of the state would create the widespread, genuine sorrow that comes to so many as the news of the death of Judge Doan. To know him was to respect him and to associate with him was to love him. He was a builder, a peer in his profession, a leader in his church and a grand master in his lodge. Judge Doan was a prominent and high Mason.

Relatives living are; a son, John Doan, and family of Yuma; Mrs. Frank Doan, daughter-in-law, resident of Douglas.

Judge Doan was a native of Circleville, Pickaway county, Ohio. He was born on July 21, 1846. He received his early education in the public schools of his native city and afterward entered Ohio Wesleyan university at Delaware, Ohio, graduating from that institution with an A. B. and an A. M. degree, completing his work there in 1872. Later on he graduated from the Albany school at Albany, New York with an LL. B. degree.

He was admitted to practice law before the supreme court of Missouri in 1869 and was a member of the Pike county bar. He came to Arizona in 1888 and was admitted to the bar of the supreme court of the territory. He served as district attorney for Pinal county from 1894 to 1897 after which he was appointed associate justice of the supreme court and judge of the second judicial district of the territory.

This position he retained with distinction until the state was admitted to the union in 1912 when he resumed the practice of law in Tombstone, which he considered as his home for many years. Judge Doan was in the early days of his residence in this state, a prominent figure in the work of irrigating in Yuma county and the Gillespie dam is in some measure a result of his untiring efforts to water the fertile lands of Yuma county where he lived for a number of years.

Judge Doan was a staunch Republican altho he was not active at any time in purely partisan politics but was considered a power in his own manner. He was a member of the Methodist church and has been one of the moving spirits of the church here, having been a bulwark to the very life of the institution for many years past.

The judge married in 1873 to Miss Anna Murray at Bowling Green, Missouri. There are three sons one of whom is living. Mrs. Doan passed away a number of years ago. Frank Doan, one of the sons who was killed some years past was a partner with the judge in the law firm here which has since been known as Doan and Stephenson, the partner at this time being Bruce Stephenson.

Judge Doan was grand master of the Masonic order for many years and had been active and prominent in the order throughout his lifetime in this state. He was a grand patron of the order of Eastern Star and a Knight Templar.

WORTHY CAUSE

Christmas Fund Being Raised for Old School Janitor.

Do you remember that jovial old fellow who used to ring that bell down in the basement of the old Everts school building? Possibly you remember his hooting up ringing that bell for just a minute while you ran breathlessly into the school room, just avoiding being tardy? Perhaps you men remember how you loved to go down there by the furnaces and chat with old John just a few minutes?

Well this same "Old John" did these things and many more down in that same building for over forty years. He is now broken financially and physically and needs your assistance. He has been confined to his bed for many months due to a stroke of paralysis.

A Christmas fund is being raised for John Fohl and we are sure that every former student of Everts will wish to do his bit. A paper is being circulated and when this is presented to you, please help.

In case this paper does not come to you, one may be found in Friedman's store and one Hamilton & Ryan's.

AMUSEMENTS

Laurette Taylor's desire to prove her versatility resulted in the filming of her stage success, "One Night in Rome" the Metro-Goldwyn picture that will come to the Met theater next week. After having scored hits in her first two screen ventures "Peg O' My Heart" and "Happiness," both of which wanted to appear in a more dramatic offering, and the mystery-romance, "One Night in Rome" is the result.

It was written by J. Hartley Manners, the star's illustrious author-husband who is responsible for all the successes in which she has appeared during past seasons. Clarence G. Badger is responsible for the direction. Mr. Badger has had a series of successes during the last few years, including "Painted People," "Potash and Perlmutter," "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," "Red Lights," "Quincy Adams Sawyer" and others.

In her newest production Miss Taylor is shown as a beautiful young Italian duchess. Following the mysterious death of her worthless husband, she is forced to flee Italy and she takes the guise of a fortune teller in London. The excitement of "one night in Rome," tense tho it is, fades into significance when the story carries the characters to "one night in a castle near London."

Tom Moore, whose popularity as a leading man has been increased by his work in "Manhandled" and "Bib Brother," appears opposite Miss Taylor. Other members of the strong supporting cast include Alan Hale, Miss Du Pont, Joseph Dowling, Edna Tichenor, Warner Oland, Etta Lee, Edward Connelly, Eugene Gilbert, Brandon Hurst and Ralph Yearsley.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN.

Credit Accorded Luther.

One story ascribes the first Christmas tree to Martin Luther, who conceived the rather pretty idea that the dark branches of the young spruce, gayly illuminated with colored candles and hung with its bright ornaments and gifts, would suggest to the children the dome of heaven with its innumerable stars, and, perhaps, thoughts of praise and gratitude to Him who is the Giver of all good things around them.

The real estate was appraised as follows: The Heffner mill property, $75,000, the Crites mill property at $125,000, elevators, etc., $25,500. The receivers, Charles Gerhardt, of this city and Edwin C. Wright of Greenville, took all order to sell the same on December 22, in this city.

Irvin F. Snyder of this city, and Marion Murphy of Greenville, are attorneys for the receivers.

Looked Bad for Client.

Attorneys, in making an appeal to a jury in behalf of a client, frequently make assertions which give rise to laughter. There is hardly a jury trial that does not offer some such mirth. Recently in one of the Indianapolis Superior courts the introduction of evidence had been completed and one of the attorneys in the case arose to address the jurors. He spoke in this manner: "Gentlemen of the jury, the position of my client in this case is identical with the preacher who was walking alone on a country road one day when he met a great, big grizzly bear." At this point the judge of the court turned and whispered to a bystander: "It looks like his client is going to be torn to pieces."

Proof of Napoleon's Genius.

The genius of Napoleon discovered at length the supreme refuge of the wise man, but only after he had wasted many years in various futile activities, such as remaking the map of Europe and the legal code of France. It was after attaining true wisdom that he wrote: "The bed has become a place of luxury to me. I would not exchange it for all the thrones in the world."—Exchange.

FOREST CHIEF TELLS OF HAWAIIAN BIRDS

Describes Visit to the Bird Forest.

Honolulu.—One of the attractions of the territory of Hawaii is the bird forest in the Hawaiian National park. A visit to the spot is described by Charles Kraebel, assistant superintendent of forestry of the territory. The forest is known locally as "Kipuka Puauhi," which means "An oasis of flowering trees."

The trail to the bird forest leads from the Volcano house, at the edge of the crater of Kilauea, past sulphur banks and steam cracks, and along the path of Mauna Loa, through a low growth of Hawaiian heather and scrubby trees until open forests and smooth turf meet the eye. Two ancient peach trees stand at the threshold of the forest. Describing the scene, Mr. Kraebel says:

"Two flashes of red across the green branches are seen. It is the birds, the scarlet lili and the crimson apapane, darting from tree to tree, and pausing among the flowers of the ohia to obtain food from the bright red blossoms. When they have gained the tree tops they are almost instantly lost to view, and the keenest vision is needed to distinguish their brilliant bodies from the equally brilliant ohia flowers. Plucking a bird in red in order to protect it seems to be a paradox of nature when the bird is compelled to seek its own protection among the red flowers of a tall tree.

Endless Twitter.

"An endless twitter of birds swells into louder notes in which is heard the sweet, insistent song of the apapane, the clear 'ta-weet, ta-weet, ta-weet-ah, of the lili with its remarkable flute-like quality and a whistle of the elepaio, repeating at intervals the syllables of its native name, and always quaintly accenting the 'pa.' Another timid 'ta-weet,' distinguishable through all the other bird songs is the call of the amakihi, the fourth of this quartet of birds most commonly seen in the volcano region, a little greenish-yellow chap, quite inconspicuous in the forest.

"Generations ago, when taxes on feathers were levied by the native chiefs, an accurate knowledge of the birds was a real essential to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness for the Hawaiian."

Mr. Kraebel says the most friendly of the four native birds now seen in the Kipuka Puauhi is the elepaio, which "is wren-like in the boldness of its approach in satisfying its curiosity concerning forest visitors, wren-like again in the flit of its fan-shaped tail and the tilt of its saucy head." Mr. Kraebel further describes the bird:

"In spite of these forward qualities, which would seem to expose such a bird to more rapid extinction than its fellows, the elepaio has not only resisted contact with civilization, but has adapted itself to changed conditions and has multiplied, as so bright and self-reliant a bird should do. The elepaio is garbed in a modest brown coat, which no one ever cared to use for capes and other royal habiliments of the native chiefs, and so long as there were bugs to eat, the little fly-catcher continued to thrive and grow bold, while his neighbors, the black mano and the black o-o, each unfortunately blessed with a few tufts of yellow feathers, have long ago been hunted to extinction to furnish gauds for royalty."

Some Varieties Extinct.

Mr. Kraebel says the extinction of some birds has been due in some cases through the inability to obtain the highly specialized food which they required. He believes that through centuries of evolution certain birds developed especially constructed beaks suited only to drain nectar from certain flowers, or to crack the seeds of particular trees, and when these trees were unable themselves to resist the march of civilization and finally disappeared, the birds which depended upon them for subsistence starved to death. He says:

"A few species, for no apparent cause, have simply grown less and less in numbers, until today they are no longer found. Domestic cats gone wild have been responsible for the extinction of other species. Thus, in various ways, the total number of indigenous bird species in the Hawaiian Islands has dropped from 56 to 36, and of these three dozen species many are so rare that they are seldom seen.

"In spite of this fact the common impression absorbed by the stranger in Hawaii, that 'there are no more Hawaiian birds,' is erroneous. Excepting the shore birds, and the water-loving kind, most of our native birds are today, as they have always been, confined to the densely forested regions. It is for this reason that so few people are able to see the birds at all, or to become acquainted with more than the four whose hardihood enable them to remain so abundant near the volcano.

"Let the bird lover be consoled, for nowhere are the native birds more numerous, and nowhere in the territory will the enthusiast find a greater Hawaii than here in the Kipuka Puauhi."

Gipsies of All Bloods.

Not all the gipsies now living in Europe belong to one and the same race. It seems that at one time every nation has had a nomadic element, a remainder of the original nomadic instinct. A good many tribes of Italian zingaris are of pure Roman blood. The Spanish gitanos are of Moorish extraction. There are thousands of Croats and Slavonians roaming through the Balkans in gipsy fashion. The Romanichels in France are mostly of Alsatian origin. The gipsies of England are as much Welsh as they are Irish, and the number of Gaelic or Celtic words in their language rivals any group of other words which they use.

TROPICAL VALLEY FOUND IN ALASKA

Subterranean Fires Keep District Warm.

Seward, Alaska.—Another tropical garden spot has been found in interior Alaska. Jack Lee and Henry Russell, prospectors, stumbled into a broad valley where mammoth trees, beautiful flowers and wild game abound. This land is southwest of Mother Goose lake, in the Kejulik region, and is so different from the surrounding country, due to warmth from subterranean fires, that the men at first believed they had been transported to some tropical clime.

The district west of Iliamna lake is composed chiefly of volcanoes, mountains, tundra, lakes and low-lying hills. The country is absolutely barren of vegetation except moss and short, scrubby alders, with now and then a bunch of short grass.

Coming over a steep mountain pass, at 1,700 feet altitude, the men saw an unbroken forest beneath them. Descending into the valley they found trees three feet in diameter and vegetation far in excess of the surrounding country. Thousands of wild flowers carpeted the lush grass and every kind of game was seen. The trees include cottonwood, spruce and hemlock. The discoverers were unable to find any indication that any other human had trod the fastnesses.

A party of hunters will soon leave for the spot to get photos and description of the second warm valley reported this summer. The other lies above the Arctic circle in the headwaters of the Porcupine river.

Dance Hall "Bouncer" at Home in Dress Suit

Milwaukee.—No sheik with patent leather balloon-tire haircut or without can start any rough stuff on one of Milwaukee's dance floors and get more than an inch with it.

Bouncers de luxe, many of them athletes at Marquette university, have been installed at public dance halls. They are equally at home in evening clothes or in a battle royal, every man for himself, winner take all.

"It pays to have gentlemen bouncers," said the manager of one of the dance halls. "So, to make it good, I decided to have only college men."

There was a time when the chief requirements of a respectable "bouncer" were a cauliflower ear, a black eye, a high-necked red jersey and a set of brass knuckles, but times have changed.

The "bouncer" of today, who presides over the peace of a modern dance place, must have the ability to wear a dress suit in addition to a shining set of polished manners, the tact of a diplomat and, of course, the ability to "bounce."

Several star athletes at Marquette university, members of the two-year undefeated football team, can be found keeping in trim as "bouncers." They include La Vera Dilweg, all-western end captain-elect of the 1924 team; Francis (Oxie) Lane, 204-pound tackle; Dick Flaherty, 190-pound end, and W. E. O'Mera, a former Marquette squad member.

Wild Birds Know, Love Voice of One-Time Enemy

Toronto.—Thousands of wild birds know Jack Miner's voice and return to him yearly at his home in Kingsville, Canada.

"There were 12 of us in our family," said Miner, "and a dollar bill looked as big as a horse blanket, so my eldest brother and I took to hunting for the market. We became expert shots and many times left a bloody trail behind us. Market hunting is not sport, but murder in the first degree.

"I had positive proof that the wild-est of these creatures knew us as their deadly enemies. Finally the thought came to me that surely they would know a friend if they had one. 'I have learned a few notes of the wild goose language. I now have tags returned to me of the wild geese from 33 different states and provinces covering an area of about 4,000,000 square miles. But about the most encouraging fact is that fully 40 per cent of the birds I tag in the fall return to me the following spring.

"The last six or seven years I have fed them during March and April from 1,000 to 3,200 bushels of corn each year. Thousands of people come to see them."

Golden Ankle Chain Newest Fad in Paris

Paris.—The display of fashions at the Longchamps races indicated that skirts are now climbing back toward the knee, with no guarantee whatever, of course, that the knee is where they will stop.

Beauties from all parts of the world were among the huge crowd at the track, many of them introducing a novelty which will doubtless be the rage in America within a few days if it isn't in order there already.

This consisted of a thin gold chain, worn on the right ankle, outside the stocking. As far as could be learned from close scrutiny and some inquiry, this chain has no use whatsoever.

Simplicity of lines, however, was observed in most of the brilliant costumes. Coats were of seven-eighths length with beige the prevailing color. They were trimmed with furs, which in many cases represented no more than ordinary rabbit skins, made up in imitation of various expensive furs.

BIG ENGINE

New Track Built in Order to Get Leviathan Out of Ditch.

The big Cheapeake & Ohio railroad engine which was wrecked and thrown on its side in a ditch last Wednesday morning at Dorney, was finally placed on its wheels Friday night and was taken back to the railroad company's shop for repairs. A new track had to be built to run the wrecked leviathan out of the ditch into which it had fallen. The engine is of the Mallet model and has sixteen driving wheels and weighs 365 tons and is much heavier than the same models used by the Norfolk and Western. In order to separate the tender from the engine, oxy-acetylene torches were used to cut thru the four inch bars of steel that held the tender and engine together.

Mary's Little Lamb.

How many of us know who wrote the rhyme about Mary and her lamb? Several different people have acknowledged to authorship. But it is now certain this nursery rhyme and many other poems for children were written by Mrs. Sarah Buell Hale, about the year 1827. She was born in Newport, New Hampshire, and following the death of her husband had to provide a living for five small children. Mrs. Hale wrote many books and poems, including a two-volume novel. Later she was asked to take charge of the Ladies Magazine, the first publication exclusively for women in this country. Of all the books and poems Mrs. Hale wrote, nothing has lived but the little poem story of Mary and her lamb, which we all have loved. It was at the request of a Dr. Lowell Mason, an American composer who was anxious to introduce music in the public schools, that Mrs. Hale wrote the rhyme.

Crime Brings Own Punishment.

It is a great question whether the self-inflicted punishment of relinquishing every part of a former life even to family and friends, is not greater than the punishment of the law. The majority of fugitives flee from comparatively short-term sentences. They choose to give up freedom and liberty for life by their own decision rather than give it up for a few months or years at the decision of the courts. Even if they have found a way to hide successfully they are in constant fear of discovery. All persons have at least one small phase of their present lives that they love and wish to keep. As a fugitive one gives up every trace of a former self, for all successful fugitives have found there is always somebody to tell if there is anybody who knows.

Bible Thought for Today

PURE RELIGION.—Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this. To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world.—James 1:27.

RED CROSS

Annual Roll Call is Now on in Pickaway County Chapter.

Yearly the American Red Cross invites all the people to enter its ranks and thru membership take part in the great humanitarian work performed by this organization.

The annual roll call of Pickaway county chapter, is now on with T. D. Krinn s roll call chairman. Mr. Krinn made a most efficient chairman last year and it is his earnest desire to have a renewal of all members and many new ones added.

A duty is resting upon all to aid the ex-service man and his family and we should make it unmistakably clear the debt we owe every American soldier for their lofty, unselfish sacrifice in wartime call.

In the year the chapter has been in active service it has been able to assist many ex-service men in obtaining from the government, hospitalization, compensation, home treatment or vocational training. It has brought into the county in back compensation over $7000 and monthly awards ranging from $8 to over $100 per month, according to the per cent of disability.

The Red Cross has proved to be an indispensable instrument for the alleviation of suffering and you should give it your generous support. The membership fee is $1.

The Ideal Teacher.

What goes to constitute the ideal teacher was outlined by Dr. L. P. Jacks, principal of Manchester college, Oxford, England, in an address to a conference of Oxfordshire school teachers at Oxford the other day. "If you have a real love for boys and girls," he said, "and can put yourself in their position, so that you can interpret their meaning, sympathize with them, interest yourself not only in the clever and promising but the stupid, and can enjoy tackling these difficulties, you are just the man or woman to make a good teacher. If your temper or habit of mind leads you to think that they are a lot of little rascals who need to be kept in order and made to sit stiff on a form as a row of graven images while you do things on the blackboard and in general teach them to behave like grownups, then you will not have made good teachers."

Animals That Hunters Are Slow to Provcke

J. C. Faunthorpe, who with Arthur
S. Vern made the valuable collection of Indian fauna presented to the American Museum of Natural History,
New York, writing in Asia Magazine, says that in India, as in Africa, are animals that have obtained an undeserved reputation for ferocity.
Elephants survive in several parts of India in considerable numbers and only those that are proclaimed rogues are allowed to be shot, except under unusual circumstances. The writer says that those inclined to attack human beings unprovoked are invariably solitary males, which have morose dispositions and dislike being disturbed.

Many persons are under the impression that the Indian tiger is a ferocious beast. They will be very surprised to hear that jungle men are very much more afraid of the sloth bear and the wild boar than of the tiger or the leopard. If a man meets a sloth bear or a wild boar, particularly the former, it is about an even chance whether the animal will go straight for him or go away. Elephants are very much afraid of the sloth bear.

The Indian wild boar is a formidable animal, although he is less liable than the sloth bear to attack unprovoked.
A full-grown boar is a formidable opponent even for a tiger and a tiger will hesitate to attack a boar unless driven to do so by hunger.

time they are not in use? You no doubt have noticed that moths will not work just in one spot but will eat a little here and there that is proof that there is something there they like. A sure prevention is to have your clothing thoroly cleaned that destroys all moths; even the eggs or other germs that may be in the garment then pack them or hang them in a moth proof bag which we furnish free with each suit, coat or overcoat we clean.

Superstition Persists in Spite of Culture

The ignorant and the neurotic are not alone in their observance of superstitious practices; as many instances may be found amongst the educated classes, Elton Mayo, in Harper's Magazine, declares. The problem has nothing to do with enlightened religion, we are facing a question as to why an essentially primitive attitude of mind should persist in the most advanced societies.

Recently a leading business man of Philadelphia refused to leave a factory he was visiting by the most obvious exit. He had come in by another door and must therefore leave the building by the same door; otherwise he suffered premonitions of "bad luck."

This same belief is found widely spread through the country and mining districts of Pennsylvania and Virginia. If a visitor enters a house by one door and leaves by another, the death of some resident in the house may be expected. It is somewhat astonishing to discover in the United States, and among native born Americans (the educated not exempt) a superstitious belief with respect to visiting strangers which is held by the savage Islanders of Java, New Guinea, Borneo, and the South Pacific generally.
The elaborate ceremonies of purification after a visit from a stranger have been abandoned, but the fear itself persists.

The apparent identity of superstitious beliefs is not confined to this single instance. Over a wide field there is a most striking resemblance that calls for further investigation. A bird flying into a house or against a window means a death; this again is an omen that would be similarly interpreted in the Pacific.

Civilization has apparently developed the outward and visible signs of intellectual freedom, but not the inward reality. Many new superstitions have been added to the original and primitive list—superstitions with respect to the significance of a fallen picture, shoes left on a table, the new moon seen in a mirror, and so on indefinitely.

joyment out o' bein' elected."—Wash-

Guns, it is claimed, were invented year 1378. They were first used by the Venetians four years later. England first employed them at the siege with that "fresh air" taste

Delicious—and so beautiful in their even shape and coloring. And little wonder! For they were baked with "fresh air"—in the wonderful oven of the Estate Gas Range.
The fumes of burning gas never enter this oven—only fresh air, heated and sterilized by the exclusive Estate method, touches the food.

And this heated fresh air is distributed so uniformly throughout the oven that no matter in what part you place your baking, the same uniform results are certain. No
"pot-watching", no shifting pans—the oven ends all this worry.

600 Sheep to be Sold at PUBLIC AUCTION

On Wednesday, Nov. 19th.

At The Farm Bureau Stock Yards, Washington C. H., Ohio Sale starting at 1 o'clock p. m., Central Standard Time.

Consisting of 300 extra good young Delaine and Rambulet ewes and 200 half-blood and open wool ewes (these 200 are bred ewes), 125 extra good Delaine feeding wethers and a number of good Shrop bucks.

I don't think there was ever a safer time to buy ewes than the present. Official reports show that Australian flocks have fallen 15,000, 000 since 1913. In fact all the great sheep producing countries of the world show a proportionate falling off. The United States consumed 20 per cent more wool in 1924 than we produced.

This will be an excellent opportunity to buy a few ewes as they will be sold in pen lots (15 to 25 to the pen), thus giving all buyers a chance.

Junior Farmers Need Club Leaders

That club leadership must be increased properly to train the boys and girls of the nation who decide to remain on farms and become the bulwark of American agriculture is shown in a survey of the club work of the junior farmers just completed by Benjamin H. Darrow, director of the boys' and girls' club work of the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation.

According to the report of the Foundation, based on a count by the Department of Agriculture, 722,408 projects were begun in 1923 by 459,074 boys and girls, a number which is less than 6 per cent of the farm youth of the nation of club age. Of these projects 429,746 were completed by 249,416 club members. Girls completing their work outnumber the boys three to two, there being 150,194 girls and 99,222 boys. The report also indicates that 55.6 per cent of the enrolled girls finished their projects, while only 52.9 per cent of the boys completed theirs. The high point reached in 1918, as shown by the accompanying chart, was due to the expansion of club work in connection with the slogan of the day: "Food will win the war." After the crisis was over there was retrenchment and club work suffered.

"Many of the 8,000,000 boys and girls engaged in club work hope to leave the farm," said Darrow. "But 80 per cent of them will remain in the country, experience has shown. All who stay on the farm should have the benefit of the inspiration and training club work affords. If we are to provide this for the junior farmers of the nation, we must rapidly increase the number of county club leaders."

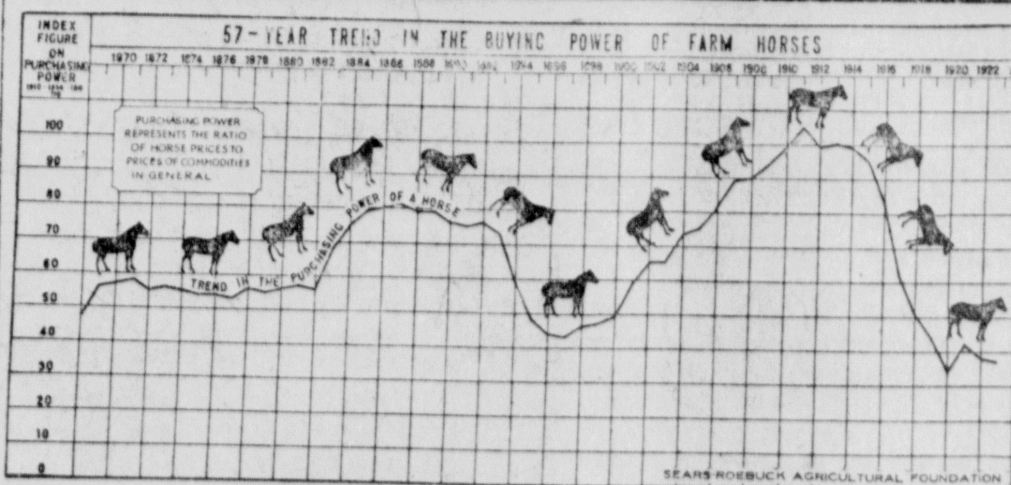

It is condition and quality rather than weight that decide whether a steer is to be placed in the beef cattle classification. Within the class it is condition and quality that largely determine the amount of profit that goes to the shipper. Choice to prime steers bring from 75 cents to $5.75 per hundred weight over the common light stock, according to a study made of lightweight steers coming to the Chicago market by the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation.

The bulk of the shipments are classified under the grades of prime steers, 1,200 to 1,600 pounds; choice steers, 1,150 to 1,600 pounds; good steers, 1,150 to 1,600 pounds; medium steers, 1,100 to 1,400 pounds, and common rough steers, 900 to 1,200 pounds. These are the classifications of the United States Bureau of Markets.

Prime beef steers are the ideal type, combining exceptional breeding and thorough finishing. Short neck and short legs, smooth flesh and well-filled, bulging briskets are prerequisites. Prime beef steers are rare, even steers good enough to grade as choice are few. They show most of the characteristics of the prime grade, good breeding and long feeding, smooth flesh and thick fat. On the block the quality steer will show a good proportion of red meat covered with a modest amount of smooth white fat. The lean, while firm of texture, will be mellow to the touch. The carcass should carry down full to the hock, being highly marbled with bright lean of a fine grain.

Horse Markets Coming Back

Horse markets are coming back. As both farm and city are demanding more and better horses, better prices may ultimately result, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation based on a study of the trend in the buying power of farm horses during the past 57 years.

Low prices probably will continue to discourage horse and mule production and cause a falling off in the equine population until average prices return, the Foundation believes. But already horse breeding operations have begun to expand in the districts possessing the kind of foundation stock capable of producing the sort of horses the market wants. Attractive prices are now being paid for all good, big sound shapely drafters coming to market and good horses of the wagon type weighing 1,400 to 1,600 pounds. Prices have advanced from the extreme depression of two years ago.

How soon the turning point will be reached on the rank and file of horses is uncertain. Previous cycles of horse and mule prices as shown by the accompanying chart have varied greatly in length. The first lasted eleven years from depression to depression, the second eighteen years and the present cycle is already twenty-seven years. It seems logical to believe that an upward turn in prices which will last for a decade or longer will start before long and that good horses and mules produced from matings in the next few years will get the benefit of that advance by the time they reach marketable age. Good horses are the exception on farms today. It is unthinkable that good farmers will be content with plugs for long.

She Was Indian at Heart

By MYRA CURTIS LANE

(© 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

"WHAT do you think, Milly? There's an Indian girl coming to teach school in Millport next term. She's got a room with Mrs. Briggs. Sure, a real Indian."

Doris Fawn was a full-blooded Indian from a western reservation. She had been adopted by a missionary and brought east, and after his death had qualified herself for teaching. She retained only misty memories of the old days on the reservation, of the blanketed bucks and squaws, of the tribal ceremonies. And if sometimes strange longings stirred in her heart she remembered that she had adopted the ways of the whites.

And they had always treated her as one of themselves. Pretty Doris Fawn, with her dark hair and dusky skin, wherever she went was a subject of curiosity and sympathy. Mrs. Briggs' motherly heart went out to the girl; she could not do enough for her.

Dickson, the senior trustee, had promised her the position when the term began. Mrs. Dickson also took a motherly interest in her. The interest of the son, Harry Dickson, was not motherly. He contrived many a meeting with her, until the girl's heart responded. She fell passionately in love with the white man. He was a hero to her.

She was to remember all her life with bitter sweetness those stolen meetings in the woods. All through that warm, bright summer they met as lovers, unsuspected by anyone. It was not until September was approaching that Harry found himself unable to meet her as before. Pressure of business, he explained.

But still the girl, with her wild nature lurking in her, frequented the woods where Harry and she had been so happy. She loved to lie in the sunshine and dream of him and of the days when he could meet her freely and ask her to become his wife. And that was how she happened to see Harry and Mary Purcell strolling along the same path arm in arm.

"Harry, are you sure you love me truly?" Mary asked.

And Doris Fawn concealed herself, like her wild namesake, in the heart of the woods.

"Because, you know, there's been some talk about you and that Indian girl," Mary went on. "You were seen on walks together."

"Absurd!" said Harry. "I don't mind telling you, Mary, I did fall for her a little. She is an attractive little thing. But that was before I came to care for you. And an Indian—why, that's just what made it safe for me to jolly the girl. She knew I could never be serious."

Doris Fawn heard it all with an incredulous face. She knew he could never be serious! He whose child she was to bear, he whom she had meant to tell, so that they could be married, and he could protect her! Suddenly she saw the trap that she had fallen into. The race gulf that could not be crossed opened before her.

"Yes, that's really too absurd, Mary," continued Harry. "As a matter of fact I've been getting a little tired of the girl. She made a nuisance of herself running after me."

"And you do love me, dear?"

"With all my heart, Mary." They kissed.

And Doris Fawn crouched in the thicket, sobbing heartbrokenly. After a while she crept out. Unconsciously she had adopted once more the Indian walk, the Indian demeanor. All that had been superficially white in her was gone. She made her way toward the railroad station.

"Running up to town, Miss Fawn?" asked the smiling ticket agent.

Doris assented.

On a reservation in the far West you may see a stolid, blanketed Indian squaw grinding corn in front of her husband's shack. She has acquired the repulsiveness of her race in middle age. A swarm of children play about her. The eldest, partly white, is growing to manhood. When the missionary stands in front of her she looks up with a grunt.

"Yes, she was educated in the East, but chose to come back to Indian ways and life," the missionary says. "They are at heart always Indians. It's almost impossible to make white people out of them."

Splendid Street Guide

The latest thing in Berlin is a map of the city engraved on bronze. The Berlin municipal authorities recently placed this bronze street guide in the center of the busy Potsdamer Platz for the convenience of strangers and the general public. It bids fair to become a very popular innovation.

The bronze plate has been fastened upon a massive block, which rises about three feet from the ground and is thus very easy to consult. It marks a vast improvement over the old-fashioned city maps.—Copper and Brass.

Ambiguous

On the door of a small laundry in a Massachusetts town the following notice to patrons was posted. Passersby read it and laughed, or sympathetically refrained from doing so, according to their individual natures: "Closed on account of sickness till Monday, or possibly Wednesday. I am not expected to live. Shall be unable to deliver for at least a week, in any case."—Boston Transcript.

Popular Begonias.

There are few more familiar plants than the begonias and few so widely grown. The most popular varieties make most excellent house plants and are used extensively for bedding purposes. Begonias are all from warm climates, but do not require a great heat, thriving well in a night temperature of 50 to 60 degrees during the winter months. There are a dozen varieties well known and popularly grown in the United States.

Cocklebur Plant Is Poisonous to Stock

Most Important to Prevent Animals Eating Weeds.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Cocklebur plants are poisonous to swine, cattle, sheep and chickens, according to the experimental findings of the United States Department of Agriculture. For a long time many people have been convinced of the poisonous properties of cockleburs when eaten by live stock, but this belief was not shared in by everybody, some contending that the deaths reported due to cockleburs were caused by the mechanical action of the burs rather than by any toxic effect of the plant.

A series of experiments carried on by the department in the years 1920, 1921, 1922 and 1923, to determine the poisonous character of cockleburs is the basis of a report just issued as Department Bulletin 1274, in which it is concluded that the cocklebur plant is poisonous to swine, cattle, sheep, and chickens. There were in all 67 experiments with swine, 11 with sheep, 12 with cattle and 19 with chickens.

To avoid the losses the most important thing is to prevent the animals from eating the weed, says the department. If there is a shortage of good forage, and animals find the young cocklebur plants, they may easily eat enough to cause serious results. Feeding milk to pigs immediately after they have eaten cockleburs has proved to be beneficial, probably because of the fat content. Successful results may be expected also when such oils and fats as bacon grease, lard and linseed oil are used as remedies.

While the burs may produce some mechanical injury and while the seeds are very poisonous, stock poisoning, the department concludes, is caused by feeding on the very young plants before the development of true leaves. A copy of this bulletin may be had upon request, as long as the supply lasts, from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Soy Bean Hay Should Be Mowed Down Like Clover

Well-cured soy-bean hay may be stacked or stored in the barn the same as any other hay. The best stage at which to cut beans for hay in order to obtain the highest feeding value is not known exactly, but it is generally considered that they should be cut when the pods are well formed and the lower ones filled. At this time the largest yield of hay per acre will be obtained, although cutting earlier will give a larger percentage of protein in the hay. If cutting is delayed too long the stalks become woody and there is a heavy loss of leaves.

Soy-bean hay should be mowed down like grass or clover and allowed to wilt in the swath, then forked into small cocks to cure slowly. Too rapid curing will cause the leaves to drop. If the weather is unfair, place the hay in windrows after it has wilted in the swath and then after it has partly cured place in large cocks. Three or four days of fairly good weather are ordinarily required to cure soy-bean hay properly.

Increased Use of Pure Bred Sires in Kentucky

Oldham county, Ky., owes an estimated increase of $128,968 in annual returns from its live stock and poultry to the growing use of pure bred sires. This figure is the result of calculations made by G. B. Nance, county agent for Oldham county, and reported to the United States Department of Agriculture. Mr. Nance based his reckonings on the difference between the percentage of pure bred sires used in his county and an average computed from the percentages of pure bred sires used in two adjoining counties. He then combined with this figure data on the superior utility value of pure bred sires from such sources as the United States Department of Agriculture and state experiment stations.

Farm Hints

Progressive live stock men everywhere use the silo.

Market trends and price fluctuations merit more attention than they have received.

The dairy cow is the most efficient farm animal for converting rough feeds into human food.

Open windows invite cold germs to step outside and stay there, and let the health fairies come in.

Silage is not a substitute for grain, but it is a 100 per cent substitute for pasture when pasture is scarce.

Dairying will always occupy a prominent and strategic place in any successful plan for balancing agriculture.

Provide warm, dry, well-ventilated hog houses. Colony houses are cheap and good. Keep floors and bedding clean. Disinfect occasionally. Dip to prevent lice. Vaccinate to prevent hog cholera. Use the mixtures recommended to prevent worms. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

DERELICTS LEAD IN MERRY CHASE

Never Where Last Reported When United States Vessels Arrive.

Norfolk, Va.—Is the Atlantic ocean strewn with derelict vessels, abandoned by their crews in storms, and which for months and perhaps years have drifted with the currents, first in one direction and then in another, defying capture by government vessels sent out to find and destroy them? Records of the hydrographic department show many vessels torn asunder by storms have drifted from the Virginia coast and other parts of the Atlantic ocean to England, Spain and Scotland, and almost back to the point where they were abandoned without being detected by searching craft.

The most recent case of the peculiar action of ocean currents is shown in the remarkable drifting record of the British schooner Governor Parr, which was abandoned off the Jersey coast October 3, 1923, and which is still wallowing around in the sea a dangerous menace to navigation. This vessel has drifted more than 3,000 miles. Sighted dozens of times by passing ships, the Parr was never in the position, or even near it, given by the vessel that saw her when a government craft went out to find her.

Seen Near Gibraltar.

According to the last reports received here the Parr was sighted in latitude 34.16 north and longitude 12.55 west. That is only a few hundred miles from Gibraltar. The vessel previously was sighted off the coasts of Nova Scotia, Spain, Portugal and Scotland.

In ninety days the schooner drifted 808 miles, approximately nine miles a day. She first started drifting in a northerly direction. As the currents changed she drifted northeast, then east, and now she is on her way back to the American coast. Marine men expect the craft to drift back to the point where she was originally abandoned by her crew. The government has spent considerable money in fuel for ships that have chased the Parr without ever getting a glimpse of her.

Government records show the schooner S. P. Blackburn, abandoned by her crew some years ago off the American coast, drifted nine months in all directions and finally went ashore, where she remained.

The schooner W. L. White, which was abandoned 88 miles east of New York, drifted many months, finally being cast upon the beach at Haskies island off the coast of Scotland. She was hunted for weeks by searching craft, but always eluded them.

The schooner Anna R. Bishop performed a drifting feat that baffled skippers of American coast guard cutters and finally gave herself up when a northeast storm drove her ashore off the British coast.

Schooner With a Record.

One of the most remarkable drifting performances on record was made by the American schooner Nettie Champion, which was abandoned by her crew in a northeast storm off Hatteras. During December a nor'easter ripped the sails from the Champion and high seas tore her seams apart, causing water to rush into the vessel's hold at an alarming rate. Her crew took to small boats, were picked up by a passing ship and landed at New York.

Practically every week after her crew left her the Champion was sighted at various points along the coast by passing ships. As late as May of the following year the Champion was sighted. She was then off the British coast. There's no record showing what fate finally overtook the old craft.

The Governor Parr, because of her peculiar drifting record, has been named "the Floating Ghost." She is loaded with lumber and is considered a most serious menace to navigation.

New York Defense Guns Shoot 30 Miles in Test

New York.—The test of the new 16-inch guns at Fort Tilden, on Rockaway point, was completed with the firing of four shots from one gun and six from the other. Army officers expressed satisfaction, and Lieut. William E. O'Connell, in command of the crews, said that the new pieces had done everything expected of them.

The guns have a range of 30 to 35 miles, which can be increased some by increasing the charge. In the test projectiles weighing 2,400 pounds were hurled 52,000 yards, approximately 30 miles. They are the largest pieces of ordnance in the world and form a part of a new system of defense for New York from attack by sea.

Names in Ink on Back Mark Newborn Babies

Baltimore.—There will be no cases of mistaken identity among the children born in the maternity ward of Johns Hopkins hospital if the new system for marking babies is a success.

At present the babies wear necklaces with their names spelled out in the heads. Under the new plan the names of the babies will be marked on their backs with ink which will wear for about three weeks.
